

The First World War Roll of Honour: Volume Seven: October - December 1916 (Volume 7)

The 17-volume First World War Roll of Honour is a commemorative series of books to remember all the military and civilian casualties of the UK, Commonwealth and former Empire nations who lost their lives during the First World War for the respective time period covered by each volume. Each entry lists, where known and recorded, the name, rank, service number, date of death and unit (or for civilian casualties, name, date of death, cause of death and age). The books are set out by Nation of Service, Military Branch then by Regiment. In some instances only initials are given for first names where full names were not known/recorded in the original sources. Officers were not issued service numbers. The last quarter of 1916 saw the final conclusion of the Somme Campaign that had been waging across the Western Front since the disastrous Battle of the Boars Head on 31st June. The world has had its first taste of mechanized warfare, with the tank making its first appearance in September and saw much early success despite setbacks. December 1916 also saw the French Verdun Offensive (the cause of the Franco-British Somme Campaign) come to an end. Although 1917 had the highest loss of life for the combined British and Commonwealth forces during the entire War, 1916 saw the greatest increase in casualty rate, with more than one and a half times as many fatalities than in 1915. This seventh book in the First World War Roll of Honour series covers the casualties attributable directly to the War (including those killed in action, died of wounds, illness or other means) for all nations of the British Empire and Commonwealth during October to December 1916. It also lists members of the Merchant Navy and the known civilian casualties caused as a direct result of enemy action that are not commemorated by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. In total, 50,807 names are included in this volume of the First World War Roll of Honour.
