

A Summary Catalogue of the Anglo-Saxon Collections (British Archaeological Reports (BAR) British)

This publication comprises a complete inventory of the Ashmolean Museums holdings of metalwork in gold, silver, copper-alloy and lead, dating from the early Anglo-Saxon period (fifth to seventh century AD). Each of almost 1,200 items (including the Amherst and Monkton composite brooches, the Ixworth cross and the Tostock buckle) is described and illustrated; chemical analyses are given for numerous examples and a full bibliography is provided. Introductory chapters survey the Museums process of accumulation from the 1780s to the present day, and analyse it on the basis of both the personalities and the archaeological sites which have contributed to the collection.
