

National Security Reform 2010: A Mid-Term Assessment

On April 22, 2010, the Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University, and the Strategic Studies Institute (SSI), U.S. Army War College, conducted a colloquium in Washington, DC, on 2010: Preparing for a Mid-Term Assessment of Leadership and National Security Reform in the Obama Administration. This conference marked the fifth collaboration between the Bush School and SSI. The first, The Future of Transatlantic Security Relations, was held in 2006. In 2007, a workshop was held in College Station, Texas, on The Interagency and Counter-insurgency Warfare. The third conference, Reform and the Next Presidents Agenda, was held in March 2008, also in College Station, Texas. That conference was also co-sponsored by the nonpartisan Project on National Security Reform (PNSR), which includes re-tired Lieutenant General Brent Scowcroft as a member of its Guiding Coalition. The PNSR guiding coalition also originally included several key members of the Obama administration. The fourth conference, Leadership and Government Reform, took place in June 2009. Two major topics were discussed: leader development in professional schools and leadership and whole of government reforms. The theme of the 2010 colloquium continued the discussion of whole of government reforms, but added three new areas of emphasis. The first identified the critical need for congressional leadership in carrying out transformational national security re-forms. The second addressed improving methods of strategic planning and assessment to meet the current U.S. fiscal constraints. The third discussed the transition from military to civilian leadership in Afghanistan and Iraq. Strategic Studies Institute.
