Not illustrated. 1868 Excerpt: ...part of the cathedral, and it seems, indeed, to be fairly entitled to much more assistance from the common funds than has as yet been given to its support. The dean and chapter, who have always felt (as I am informed) the utmost zeal for the welfare and credit of the school, have, after certain controversies which need not here be detailed, increased the value of the Kings scholarships to 21/. 13s. 4rf., with free education in classics, writing, mathematics, and arithmetic. The exhibitions tenable at the universities have been increased to 40/. 10s. during residence. The scholars and exhibitioners previously received the trifling stipends named in the statutes. They were also, however, to be maintained (alendi) at the costs of the cathedral. There are two Gunsley exhibitions, lately raised by the liberality of the master and fellows of University College, Oxford, to 45/. during residence, and 20/. while the exhibitioner remains at school. The education given is of a good quality. The two highest scholars were examined in Aristophanes, Homer, and Cicero, and showed great accuracy. One was especially spirited in translation. Some Greek composition was fairly done. The upper classes have attained great excellence in their mathematical work. Several of them were familiar with differential and integral calculus. In English history and French they did not do so well, one of the highest scholars knowing hardly anything of the former important subject. The course of instruction is modified to meet the case of boys preparing for special examinations. One scholar, preparing for the profession of a surgeon, was especially accurate in his French work. Two others, however, who paid special attention to French, were deficient in pronunciation, ...
